CHANGE IN VAT-DEFERRAL REGIME

No more deferral of VAT on imported capital goods but rather on only locally manufactured capital goods thus creating a Policy shift dilemma

What is a deferral of VAT on capital goods?

Deferment means a postponement of payment of the Value Added Tax in respect of capital goods (TRA website). This is a policy instrument that provides room for an investor to delay or postpone or settle the payment of Value added tax (VAT) on capital goods to a later period/date. Normally, this is based on fulfilling certain legal and operational requirements including fundamentally the applicant must be conducting an economic activity that will generate taxable supplies (that is goods or services will be charged VAT). The period to which VAT payment is deferred may differ from one jurisdiction to another.

Why is it given to investors?

This policy regime has been embraced by countries including Tanzania Mainland to provide investment relief and enable investors to have a smooth landing when starting an investment that requires the purchase of certain capital goods as may be prescribed in tax laws. It is basically a facilitative window to investors that allows them not to incur a significant cost immediately at the start of their investment however, one is given time to procure, install, and use capital goods to manufacture taxable supplies and pay VAT at a later period.

What has been the practice in Tanzania Mainland?

For a while now (about 8 years), Tanzania has been implementing this policy regime but applicable to only imported capital. That is, an investor upon fulfilling certain requirements as prescribed by the various tax laws may be granted VAT deferral for up to 10 years on imported capital goods by the Commissioner General of Tanzania Revenue Authority (TRA). In addition to other requirements, as prescribed in the tax laws, this policy is applicable only if the imported capital has not been procured for resale but rather to conduct an economic activity that generates a turnover of at least ninety percent (90%) of taxable (vatable) supplies (See Value Added Tax Act, Cap 148; Section 11 (sub-section 1 up to 10) and the VAT embodied on each unit of the imported capital good must have VAT element exceeding TZS 20,000,000. Goods imported whose VAT is less than 20,000,000/- shall be treated as normal and shall follow normal rules of calculation of taxes by Customs laws and procedures. The deferment is due within ten years.

It should be noted that, for the sake of VAT deferment, the items that fall under the wing of VAT deferment are plant and machinery only. Spare parts and other decorative items are not eligible for VAT deferment.

What is the new policy regime being adopted in Tanzania?

Through the Finance Act 2023, the Value Added Tax, Cap 148 has been amended to introduce two policy shifts.

First, to put a stop to the application of Section 11 of the Value Added Tax Act, Cap 148 on imported capital goods effective 30th June 2026. This means investors who wish to import capital goods and enjoy VAT deferral policy instruments should do so between now and the end of the fiscal year 2025/26, specifically 30th June 2026.

Second, the Act has been amended to allow VAT deferral policy to apply to locally manufactured capital goods while adhering to the same requirements as prescribed in the tax laws (see Finance Act, 2023; VAT Act, Cap 148 Section 11 (1 up to 10)).

Legal analysis on whether termination of Employees as the result of liquidation is subject to retrenchment procedures

Liquidation is a total closure of the company or entity's while retrenchment means reduction of number of workforces at the workplace due to operational requirements.

Both retrenchment and liquidation have the effect of ending the employment relationship. The line of difference between the two is that retrenchment may end only some job position and the company/entity continues to operate while in liquidation, all the job position comes to an end and the company ceases to operate.

Procedure for retrenchment is guided by the whole of section 38 of the Employment and Labour Relations Act, Cap 366 R.E 2002. The said provision much emphasizes on consultation between employer and employee and if the consultation fails then the matter to be referred to CMA for mediation and decision (In case it goes for Arbitration).

The core question here is whether the procedures retrenchment should be applicable in the same manner as in liquidation.

The above question was perfectly answered by the Court of Appeal presided by His Lordship Justice of Appeal Hon Justice Ndikain the cases HAIDER MWINIMVUA & 99 OTHERS Versus DIB AND FBME where the Court had this to say;

“Retrenchment is used restrictively to mean the discharge of surplus labour due to operational requirements in a continuing or running undertaking. It does not apply to the instant case where FBME was closed down and wound up under compulsory liquidation pursuant to the provision of Banking Act.”

From the above proposition, the Court made it clear that, for the case of liquidation, one need not observe all the processes of retrenchment as the company is going to cease to exist.

To make it clearer and more precise, there are some of the retrenchment procedures which are totally inapplicable in liquidation cases. For instance, measures to avoid or minimize retrenchment exercise, selection criteria and the like.

Also in liquidation, the law does not make it mandatory to refer the matter to CMA in case of disagreement between the employer and the employee (s) in consultation processes as it is opposed to retrenchment where such observation is mandatory.

Suffice to say that the meeting point between the two cases i.e., liquidation and retrenchment is consultations to avoid any element of surprises.

The terminal benefits may also be the same which may include one month salary in lieu of notice, salary for the last working days, repatriation and subsistence allowance (if applicable) accrued leave (if any) and certificate of service.

To ensure compliance, you may wish to revisit your company policy to see what it says or provides with regard to terminal benefits in case of retrenchment or liquidation
